She was no Cherub, but a child,
Whose presence was a sweet delight;
Her cheek's red rose was almost wild,
Her brilliant eyes were stars of light.

I said she was no Angel, though Her beauty sure was born above. She was one made for bliss below, A soul and form for us to love. And yet the Giver took his gift.
For barren earth too rich and rare;
From earth our easnest eyes we'll lift
